

ABSTRACT

Heating a printing substance and/or toner, in an electrophotographic printer, with a standing microwave formed by at least one cavity resonator, with the printed matter being caused to move through the resonator gap. The power
5 distribution of the microwave applied by the resonator is shaped and configured for specific application requirements.